Bural Sonnet ... Nobember.

GIVE to the Poor! warm clothing-firing-food-At once, unsparingly, and humbly give! Prevent the winter-cough, the frame-chilled broad Of throes which make it weariness to live. For, lo! November, drenched in fogs and rains, Glooms on the air, and incubates the Earth;

Days short and fickle nip the laborer's gains, And bring increase—of suffering and of dearth Lucky the Woodman who shall find employ; The hinds, who stall the kine, or pen the sheep; Plant the young tree : or, lest the floods destroy, Extend the drainage, and the courses keep. The busy, and the bounteous, at this time, Are mind and body-warm, alone, throughout our clime.

PROSE POSTSCRIPT .- The modes of complying with two of the above exhortations in behalf of the Poor are sufficiently obvious; but it may, perhaps, be of service to suggest a general rummage of our wardrobes and old stores, for the purpose of bestowing what can be spared, and what is cast off, upon those to whein, in the wet and cold season, they will prove benef ctions indeed. Again, or the principle of Prevention, we should seek out, by our own or other discreet agency, objects for our bounty, and not wait till almost incurable want or disease has thrust them upon our notice. > From Sargent's Magazine. BROADWAY. BY N. P. WILLIS.

ALL hail, thou ever joyous Broadway! Hail Broadway, my crony! Broadway my jolly companion! Broadway, my Ganymede, my Mercury my purveyor of all things pleasurable, and of somthings "pleasant but wrong." Inexhaustible old Broadway! Funny old Broadway!-(for person fied thou shalt be!)

" Father Themes," they say-and " Father Ti ber " and the boatmen in the " broad horns," talk of "old Mother Mississippi!" But thou, my merry old Broadway, art too promiscuous for our mother-too lax and loving for our exemplary father. Yet more prodigal of wealth art thou than Thames or Tiber-more fecund than Mississippe How wilt thou be denominated in the apostrophic nomenclature of affectionate patriotism?

BROADWAY, OUR UNCLE! Does that sound well? Tell us, oh Astor an Croton! Tell us, oh Stewart and Thompson! Tel us, oh Brandretk and Battery, Park, Niblo, and Bowling-green-ye that are the Dii Minores of this paved Paradise, the planets of this inverted parallel of the milky-way-tell us, what think you of "our UNCLE?" Halleck, my "croaker"-thou that hast mad-"Scudder's balcony" immortal as Marco Bozza ris-string up thy specie lyre and clink us a metal-lic presn to our "Nuncle" of Broadway!

Bard of "Thanatopsis"-brood with thy wings of solemn incubation upon the maniashopsis of ou uncle! So shall the "unhappy born to pay" added to the great company of admirers. (And s. in the next plate of the poets," shall thy head b put where the man a-top's is-and looking less like old Time or thy grandfacher!)

Give us the genesis of our uncle, oh aborigin Stone!

Fuse and re-cast him in the great foundry of th imagination, oh Cooper, creative and combative! Come, Morris, with thy muse of anti-" hack-i down"ativeness, and thy anacreontics on the water thou drinkest not-Come Paulding, with thy Ica rian wings-Come, Wetmore, with thy few-and far-betweenities-Come, all the bards of Manhat tan, and glorify old Broadway our Uncle!

For was not the late marriage of our fath-Knickerbocker Manhattan to Miss Pastora Crotos celebrated with song and ceremony, and our undi-(crowded as he was from the even tenor of his way,) was he not pointedly omitted in the laureat' Epithalamium! Truly, Broadway, oh ever-length ening uncle! our familiarity with thee must have bred contempt. But, alas for distinction !-

"Glory is like a circle in the water. Which never ceaseth to enlarge itself
Till, by broad spreading, it disperse to nought! And now let us down softly from these giddy stilts, and common sense take us into his safer

We do not write for Autolycus, nor for Timon (Thieves and misanthropes do not commonly tak the monthlies.) And as all other classes of man kind yield to the gregarious instinct of our racewe feel free to discourse of Broadway as a place beloved. Beloved it is-by the philanthropist, interested in the peccant varieties of his fellow-creatures; by the old, who love to look upon the young; and by the young, who love to look upor each other; (ah! the celestial qualities of youth!) -by the serious, for whom there would seem to be resorts less thronged with sinners (if need were,) and by sinners, who are at least guiltless of hypoc risy, for with little disguise, they "love one and ther." Now, if beautiful women are not laudable objects of contemplation and curiosity, as St. Anthony avers (and he is welcome to let them alone,) we are not warned against beautiful children, nor beautiful horses, nor the bright sunshine, nor the gay product of the silkworm, nor the "stuffs from Colchis and Trebizond." And we (as many as there are of us) are free to confess our weakness for these sights (women included,) and our melancholy preference of them to the contemplation of most walls, and some kinds of very exemplary reading-for flesh is weak! Are you with us, of frail reader? Could you, without violence to your better nature, take a walk with us in Broadway Pray take our arm.

Two o'clock and a sunny day in October !-Whirl! whirl! What a tumult of wheels! Flash flaunt! What a movement of bright colors-like walking mosaic, like a maggoty rainbow, like "dry goods" taking the air. Are the shops disemboweled? Are our eyes turned to prisms?-Slide-slide; shuffle-shuffle; nod-dodge-" Take care of the cart at the crossing! "-" What a pretty girl!"-" Hush! "-" Morning paper, sit-Tribune and Express ?" And now, when you have recovered from your first lausch into the crowd, keep steadily to the right, and if I squeezyour arm, look at the person coming toward us.

Very handsome, isn't she? And apparently in a very great hurry, and apparently very much dis gusted at being seen in the street at all. You would think, now, that that lady's coachman was ill and that she was, for this once in her life, walking alone to her mother's. But she is more amused at this moment than she will be again to-day; and to-morrow she will take the same walk to be hap py again. She has a husband, however, and a eautiful house, and not a wish (that money can gratify) ungratified. And her drawing-rooms are full of exquisite objects of art. She might stay contentedly at home, you think? No; she was a belle, pampered with admiration when she married, and she married a synical and cold-blooded parsnip, who sits like a snarling ogre among his statues and pictures-a spot on his own ottomana blemish in the elegance of his own house. She married him for an establishment, but forgot he was a part of it-dazzled with the frame, she overlooked the hideousness of the picture. And he knows this, and likes her, with his statues, as his property, and is pleased to have her seen as his wife, though she is the wife to but one part of him, his vanity. She finds it hard to feel beautiful at breakfast, with her husband on the other side of the table, and he finds it hard to be very bland with a wife who looks at his acrid physiognomy with a shudder. A superb house with him in it, is like a fine tulip with an adder in it. But she is a woman, and whether she has a heart or no, she has a well cultivated vanity, and, unluckily, the parents who taught her to secure luxury in wed-lock, taught her no foresight as to her more needful supply of admiration. Love she would like very well, but admired she must be! And too cold and worldly to be imprudent, and too proud to be willing to seem pleased with the gaze of Broad-which is given to her beauty by the passers-by, and has very little happiness beyond her daily hurried walk on the crowded pare. She'll make a match of sentiment if she gets another chance, or, at any rate, will marry for some love and less money. Heaven help her through with her present chrysalis! "How are you?"

" How are you?"

What would a new-dropp'd angel think of these two unanswered questions? Indeed, what would an angel think of that smiling fellow who ex-changed this nonsense with me? He is one of a thousand in the city who, "like the prodigal, squeezed through a horn," are happy for having get through the tightest place of this mortal life. Though his dimensions are immeasurably smaller than they were not long ago, they are so much easier than they grew to be after, that he feels as if, like uncle Toby's fly, there was room enough in the world for him now. He is easy with the rebound after being broke with overstraining. He was a merchant, reputed to have made money enough. Sensitive and punctilious in all the relations of life, he was particularly soigné of his commercial honor. Never was a breath sullied that clear escutcheon! For this he was supposed to be over-careful-for this he was inflexible where his heart would have prompted him to be indulgent-for this it was soberly believed, he would sacrifice his life. His wife was (and has since proved herself by trial) an admirable woman, and with fine children and good looks of his own, he was one of those fallacious contradictions of the equal distribution of mortal happiness. Wellhis star began to descend from its apogee, and he courageously lugged out his philosophy and retrenched his expenditure. He could do with less and be happy. His paper was redeemed as yet, and his honor without a flaw. No deprivations to himself could " sour his patient cheek." But "Who sets back to its meridian throne

Friends failed him right and left. Resources, trusted like the pillars of Hercules, gave way. And then began an agony of mind which could only be increased, even hereafter, by the increased capacity of the mind-for, short of reason overturned, he could suffer no more. A thousand years of a common tenor of life would seem horter than those six terrible months of sinking nto bankruptcy. But now comes the curious par of it! He suddenly took the benefit of the bank rupt law. And instead of lying still prostrate upon the ground, crushed and humiliated-instead of hiding his head, as he longed to do while he still promised to pay, degraded, spiritless, lost, to the injoyment of life-instead of still seeming an obect of pity to the most ruthless sufferer by his fall -up, like a snapped spring, he bounds to the em ovrean! He could not be gayer with his debts paid and his foctune in his hands again! He walks the street. smiling, and with a light step He is a little smarter than he used to be in his iress. He eats well, and the wrinkles have rereated, and his eyes have thrown open their windows, and (as you saw when he passed) there is not a merrier or more fortunate looking idler in his merry Broadway! Now, quere?-Is there a provision in nature for honor to cast its skin Becomes it new, scarless and white, after a cerain wear, tear and suffering? Does a man re member, till, with the anguish of remembering, he lorgets? Has God, in our construction, provided a recuperative, to guard us against over self-inflic tion? Can we use up our sense of shame with ver-working it, and do we come then to a straum of self-approval and self-glorification? Enfin -is this inward whitewashing confined only to money-spots, and is nature hereby provided with a corrective check to our implacabilities of pocket? But adjourn speculation! We will finish our philosophy in Florence's cloister. Ah! what an exquisite foot-(not feet, for we never see but one foot at a time-but I like not your Polyphemic mention of single eyes, as "her eye was blue.") The American foot shall be as famous in history as the Greek upper lip or Phidian nose. "There's a divinity that shapes our ends!" And somebody-(an Englishman, too, oh meraviglia!) remarked the other day that he was struck with the universal air noble of American women. (As why not, to be sure!-for the next class above them is the next class of angels 'winged and unclad''-but it is pleasant to be as sured now and then of a self-evident proposition.

Are you tired? Proadway is an endless furnisher of both walk and talk. We'll have another strell and gossip, on another sunny day. For the present, adien

Unfortunately, children are seldom free from them, and, as they instate the symptoms of almost every other complaint, they often produce alarming effects without being suspected. Worms are not only a cause of disease themselves, but by their irritation aggravate all other diseases, wandering from one part of the body to the other, winding these leves up into large balls and obstructing the bowels, and frequently the throat, causing convuisious, and too often death. The desired remedy will be assions, and too often death. The desired remedy will be uned in Dr. JAYNE'S TONIC VERMIFUGE, which will very soon destroy the Worms, and invigorate the powers of figestion so as to prevent a return of them.
